THE BETTER THE ROAD

"The American public is readily susceptible to drives to find the cure and make can, polio, heart ailments and whatnot, says officer Gillette, "but we can't get them too much confused about accident prevention, when we have the cure."

If 942 persons were to die in Florida this year from polio, cancer, heart trouble, or some other disease, we'd have a DRIVE to do some research and provide cures—is it the method of giving that gets folks interested?

Two hundred horses under a truck hold gets our fresh vegetable to market, but the same number of horses under a passenger car gets our human prod in trouble.

Too Late To Classify

By Russell Kay Although the Florida State Racing Commission had nothing to do with it, the racing scene in Florida has been extended this year with the hottest race of all scheduled this spring. It will be known as the Extra Added Governor's Derby and in all probability will be run in two heats.

Entries to date include three contenders and it is possible others will be entered before the race starts. Stables have been set up for Odham, Collins and Johns with trainers busy as bees.

The racing rules for the commission are more or less obscure at the moment and the Florida Supreme Court will serve as a sort of Racing Commission to determine just who is and who isn't eligible to enter.

At the moment Bralley Odham seems to be a favorite with the dopesters. He came in a close second at the last gubernatorial event and is off to a flying start again this time. Seasoned and experienced with a good knowledge of the course, he is expected to run a fine race. He is a bit wild at times and more or less unpredictable; he is hard to handle and inclined to take the bit in his teeth.

LeRoy Collins, a recognized thoroughbred, has shown up well wherever he has been entered in the past and has several wins to his credit, but this is the first time he has ever been entered in a big time event like the gubernatorial Derby. Observers contend that he is not as fast as Odham but is steadier and more dependable and has a record of handling himself well. His trainers are confident he will give an excellent account of himself. Conservative bettors like him and his odds will improve.

Johns, the Charley horse, is as dark as they come but has a tremendous advantage. While less experienced than either Odham or Collins, he is in the saddle. He has some veteran trainers and handlers and carries the official gubernatorial colors. He has the No. 1 spot in the paddock and is constantly in the public eye. He is getting top billing and attracts more attention than any other entry. Because of his official rating he can draw bigger crowds and get more attention, and his handlers are seeing to it that he doesn't miss a bet where publicity is concerned.

At Hialeah or Gulfstream he would probably get more attention right now than a Kentucky Derby winner. To build up public interest and following he is being displayed wherever possible and will be seen in Tampa during the Florida State

U. OF F. STUDENT PROOF POLIO NO BAR TO EDUCATION

The crippling effects of a serious polio attack suffered while he was stationed at the Jacksonville Naval Air Station in 1931 failed to halt Sidney C. Matherly's desire for a master's degree. Here the College Park, Ga. student confers with Walter J. Matherly, dean of the College of Business Administration, U. of Fla., concerning his second semester registration. Dean Matherly has more than a passing interest in the case since he is state campaign director for the 1954 March of Dimes.

The smiling face in the background belongs to Willis Smith, chauffeur, companion, and "chief cook and bottle-washer" for Matherly, who is seeking a master's degree in business administration with a major in accounting.

Fair and Gasparilla Carnival. This single appearance will insure him an audience of a half million plus plenty of newspaper and radio breaks.

The following week he will get the breaks at the Florida Citrus Exposition in Winter Haven. He may not face as well there for he will probably be hidden hard at the annual "Press Breakfast" when the newspaper boys let their hair down and have a lot of fun taking gubernatorial records apart to find out what they are made of.

Johns has been known to stumble in the past, but his trainers say he has overcome this fault and his condition is improving every day. Efforts are being made in some quarters to have him disqualified, but handlers say it can't be done and they are going right ahead with their plans to run him in the Derby.

The pari-mutuel windows will be closed for this race but it is rumored that there will be plenty of money up. Pick your own winner and get a comfortable seat in the club house for this is one race you don't want to miss. The track may be muddy so don't stand too close to the rail.

VETERANS INFORMATION AND SERVICE

A Post That Cannot Be Meant
Did you ever step to realize that the highest price ever paid for an ideal is the price paid for victory in war, for which the veterans of Florida, along with others of our great Nation, have given their lives, their limbs, their sanity, their blood, their economic future and security, their personal happiness, and the security and happiness of their families? It is only because their efforts... proved successful, that we today continue to have our individual freedoms guaranteed to us. These same four freedoms are the basis of our American way of life.

We recognize that our American way of life is the envy of the entire civilized world. We also recognize that our American way of life is not a God-given right; and that to preserve it we must make sacrifices and on occasion fight for it. We are also appreciative of the fact that the debts of war must be paid. To those skilled in accounting, it is comparatively an easy matter to compute the cost of war in so far as it concerns the payment in dollars for tanks, planes, ships, guns and other implements of war.

The care of our unfortunate disabled veterans and their families, in our humble opinion, is surely just as much a part of the cost of war as is the purchase of implements and ammunition needed to wage war. We believe all will agree that such benefits are a part of the total cost of war that cannot be measured in dollars and cents only.

It is a moral obligation on the part of our Nation and of each and every State. Therefore, we are at least to understand how certain groups continue to attack the hospital care which are provided by the Federal Government for our war veterans.

He terms in the House and his work on flood control, education, and his membership on the Legislative Council for the Sixth Congressional District attest to his contribution in behalf of his country.

Dickinson further stated in making his announcement, "My primary interest in seeking this office is that I believe my qualifications and background afford me an opportunity to render a valuable service to Palm Beach County. Our county is the largest and one of the fastest growing counties in Florida, and as such, every area of our county must be represented vigorously and effectively. This I pledge to do if elected."

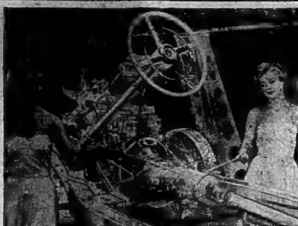

"As a lifelong resident of Palm Beach County, I am fully acquainted with the tremendous strides that we have made in farming, cattle raising, development of industry and resort trade. We must have active representation in the House of Representatives for the advancement of our flood control program, minimum foundation school program, welfare and public health activities, necessary legislation to improve the roads and highways throughout Palm Beach County, and to better provide for our elderly citizens' security. I will sincerely appreciate your active support and am deeply appreciative of all who have already helped and offered assistance."

Dickinson, born in W. S. is the son of Mrs. Georgia Bell Dickinson of West Palm Beach, and the late Fred O. Dickinson, Sr., who until his death resided here for 30 years. After completing his law studies he became associated with Horner C. Fisher and later became a member of the law firm of Fisher & Dickinson, West Palm Beach.

Dickinson was a member of the Board of Governors, Junior Bar Section of The Florida Bar in 1953, and is a member of the following: Palm Beach County, Florida and American Bar Association; West Palm Beach Junior Chamber of Commerce; Palm Beach American Legion

WHITHER ARE WE TENDING?
"If we could first know where we are, and whither we are tending, we could better judge what to do and how to do it." — Abraham Lincoln. It is customary with our organization as well as with many others to periodically take stock in order to determine "where we are, and whither we are tending," so that we may "better judge what to do and how to do it." Regardless of how many other times such examination takes place, the end of the year is almost universally accepted as a time of accounting. As we look back over the past twelve months, the National Rifle Association can point with pride to certain things which it has done to increase its stature among the populace of our country, to strengthen the ties of membership, and to make it more worth-while for any patriotic citizen to be one of us.

One of the outstanding events of 1953 was the return of the National Matches to Camp Perry. For the first time in more than a decade those matches included all three segments of our sport—smallbore, pistol, and high power—each with an extended program and all of them combined into a single grand tournament.

There has been a renewed interest in marksmanship among all of the Armed Services, the National Guard and the Reserve components. There has been a better understanding we believe, that a man, be he soldier or civilian, is of value in the defense of this nation in accordance with his ability to use the rifle with which he is armed. The NRA and the Armed Forces are working closer today than for many a year to carry out that basic tenet of our Association that every citizen of military age should know how to shoot.

Working in cooperation with the National Education Association we have prepared a course of instruction in basic safe gun handling which has been widely acclaimed and adopted. Almost solely through our efforts there is a more general acceptance today of the truism that education in proper gun handling is a necessary part of responsible legislation is the sensible approach to gun accidents. Our growing junior program points, up the fact, also, that supervised recreational shooting can provide the answer to improper use of firearms among our youth.

By the appointment of a standing committee for gun collectors we have recognized the fact that every individual who owns a firearm is a collector of sorts. It makes no difference whether it be a handgun, rifle, shotgun, air gun or a true antique, it is a source of pride and enjoyment to the owner. In a sense, then, the Gun Collectors Committee serves each of our members, while concerning itself particularly with the field of collector items.

To an ever-increasing degree the National Rifle Association is accepted by groups and by individuals as the representative of all law-abiding citizens who are interested in the ownership of firearms for recreation or for the defense of home and country. Many of the sportsmen's groups, the National Education Association, the Boy Scouts of America, veterans' organizations, Members of Congress, the National Recreation Association and many, many others similar to them, look to us today for advice and assistance in matters related to the broad purposes of our organization.

We are striving constantly to increase the benefits of membership in NRA. For the first time in eighty-two years a Life Member may now exercise the privilege of casting his ballot for the election of Directors without actually attending the annual meeting in person. We believe that our committees are more active and our membership better served now than they have ever been.

There are a few of the accomplishments of the past twelve months. We are now some 220, 000 strong. We have added almost five new Life Members every calendar day since January 1st, 1953, until there are nearly 25,000 who belong to this category. As a non-profit membership Association our strength depends upon the number and the character of those individuals who comprise it. In many respects 1953 has been one of the most momentous in NRA history. It has paved the way for the larger and more influential NRA that it needed to do the task we have set.

That is "where we are." "Whither we tend"—and how strong and influential—depends upon the continuous support and earnest efforts of each one of us.

The Florida State Advertising Commission will speed every new member to bring new industries to Florida.

Farm Experts Look Ahead; See Big Food Needs Facing Nation in 1960

By IRA MILLER
Farm Distribution Bureau

The agricultural industry, like so many others, has had its share of peaks and valleys during the present year. Still it has held firm to a continuing trend of making farm work

Years ahead look like busy time for farmers.

...than farm and estate. A also...
In the decade after 1940, the number of farms with electricity doubled; combining and corn pickers more than tripled; milking machines quadrupled; crop yields per acre and livestock production per animal unit doubled. By that time, it is predicted, the population of the United States will have increased to about 175,000,000. To eat as well in 1960 as the nation is eating today will require an additional 1,000,000,000 pounds of meat; 300,000,000 dozen more eggs; about 6,000,000,000 pounds more of wheat; 1,000,000,000 pounds more of feed grains; and several hundred million more pounds of feed grains, and corresponding increases in requirements for fruits, vegetables and other farm products. Forty years ago such high goals lent job of holding the canoe sideways long enough to delay the sinking, so Ross and Celeste could quickly transfer to the larger boat. This they did. Meanwhile, Ross somehow managed to keep the alligator from escaping by holding the rope in one hand and keeping the nose taut. The alligator was then towed 15-mile to the landing and is now on exhibit at the Reptile Institute. I watched Ross unload the gator and it fought every inch of the way. The alligator can also be seen in the exhibit. The two cuts in the shoe are about an inch wide and 1 1/2 inches apart, looking like they'd been slashed with a razor. It was a miracle that the alligator's teeth didn't close down on her foot. A bad infection developed in her foot within a few hours, but with medical care Celeste recovered within a week and was able to walk again.

WASHINGTON NEWS LETTER

From...
The Administration's budget for the fiscal year beginning July 1 has been sent to Congress. Buried deep within it under flood control is an item of $3,620,000 for our long range program in Florida.
When this program was conceived and approved, principally because of its importance to the national welfare, it was envisioned as a progressive work, gaining momentum and support each year. In other words, it began with a small appropriation and as the work progressed, economy dictated increasing funds until finally the largest sum would be spent on the year of completion.
There appears a determination to postpone the period when this great project will become profitable. Failure to support it adequately will retard Florida's economy and damage national resources. It is hoped the congress will recognize the greater need which the budget bureau has not grasped.
Meanwhile, the people of Florida are being called upon again to face the possibility of huge losses in farms, groves and herds. The flood control system has reached the crucial stage when substantial support is required. It is like the time in battle, when the enemy is wavering and the commander throws his reserves into the fray to clinch a swift and overwhelming victory. Failure to make advantage of such a development means great suffering, possible defeat.

By Herb Mosher
"If this account of the alligator accident sounds rather fantastic, it is because it's one of those truth-is-stranger-than-fiction stories that we sincerely hope will happen only once in a lifetime." Is how this week's "gator-tale," by Evertia Phillips, begins. Incidentally, this is the first "gator-story to arrive since this column extended an invitation to readers to send in yarns about alligators.

"Ross and Celeste Allen" were gator hunting at Blvins Aron Lake near Gainesville," she continues, "residents of that area having requested them to take some of the big alligators from the lake because of the danger to people and domestic animals. The game commission granted a permit for their capture and Ross preferred to get them alive.

"It was full moon so not the best time for a gator hunt. However, they got close to a 9 1/2 ft alligator and Celeste noosed it. She was in the bow of the canoe and Ross in the stern. The gator pulled the canoe around and headed toward the shore of the lake. Meanwhile, Ross took over the handling of the gator. Celeste turned around, facing him. Following as closely as possible, in another boat, Ken Goodman, photographer, was trying to get pictures when the alligator suddenly broke loose! "Betty and John Allen were also in the camera boat. Farther away, Robert and Tom Allen, and Robbie and John Ross, were in a larger, aluminum canoe, watching the capture when the totally unexpected happened. The canoe slipped down over the alligator's head, leaving its head more free to thrash around, and when Ross tried to get close enough to the gator to tie his mouth shut, over the side of the canoe — unaware the alligator came up underneath the canoe, lashing out with fury, and biting the canoe midships of the waterline! For an unfortunate coincidence, Celeste's foot was on the very spot inside the canoe where the gator-teeth came crashing through, and three teeth went through her shoe, one tooth thrusting nearly an inch into her foot! She called out that she had been bitten, but in all the confusion and excitement was not heard. Later she said there was no pain at the moment. Her foot was completely numb for some hours.

"With a hole about a foot in diameter in the canoe, of course it started to sink — right on top of the alligator! Ross called for the camera boat to hurry to the rescue. They did an excel-

Mr. Sayles stated that in view of the current trends in education there is a most pressing need for a dynamic Principals' Council in the county.
